artist statement

I am Kimberly Rice, known artistically as KRice, a contemporary artist based in the Washington, DC area.

Working at the intersection of Abstract Expressionism and Figurative Abstraction, I create large-scale, mixed-media works exploring consciousness, identity, liberation, spirituality, and the evolving human experience. At the center of my practice is a fascination with the interior human experience - the multiplicity of selves we carry, the tension between our conscious and subconscious lives, and the ways memory, emotion, conditioning, intuition, and circumstance continually shape who we are and how we move through the world.

Drawing from lived experience, observation, imagination, and the subconscious, I am interested not only in who we are, but in who we might become when we move beyond fear, conditioning, limitation, and the familiar.

Through saturated color, expressive line, layered mark-making, dimensional elements, language, and recurring symbolic forms, I construct visual narratives that move between the real and the imagined. Figures emerge, dissolve, distort, fragment, and overlap, reflecting the complexity of identity and the ways we continually reconstruct ourselves and our understanding of the world around us.

My work considers the forces that shape and confine us, both internal and external, while imagining what might exist beyond them. I am drawn to the tension between visibility and invisibility, belonging and individuality, constraint and freedom, reaction and awareness, and the space between who we have been and who we are becoming.

Scale and materiality are integral to my practice. I create work intended to hold space - visually, emotionally, and energetically. I want each piece to function as more than an object. I want it to become a presence.

At its core, my practice is an exploration of possibility: the courage to question what we have inherited, the freedom to move beyond what confines us, and the power to imagine ourselves - and the world around us -differently.

Bold, expressive, and rooted in the exploration of identity consciousness, and transformation.

The Work

This collection represents a selection of works from an ongoing studio practice exploring evolving themes of consciousness, identity, and human experience.

My practice moves fluidly between Abstract Expressionism and Figurative Abstraction, using saturated color, distortion, symbolism, and layered gesture to explore themes of consciousness, identity, spirituality, technology, music, and human connection.

Many of my works begin without a fixed plan, allowing intuition and energy to guide the process. As layers develop, characters, forms, and symbols often emerge organically - creating narratives that are both personal and universally interpretable.

I am particularly interested in creating work that carries emotional presence and visual impact. Whether through scale, color, or composition, my intention is for each piece to invite curiosity, conversation, and reflection.

The following pages present selected works from my studio, along with pieces now held in private collections.
